This facsimile edition of the Revised 1948 Edition of Penn Studies in Landscape Architecture presents a comprehensive collection of essays and articles that explore the history, theory, and practice of landscape architecture.

Originally published in 1910, Penn Studies in Landscape Architecture was one of the first journals in the United States dedicated to the study of landscape architecture. The journal was founded by Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., the son of the著名 landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted. Olmsted, Jr. served as the journal's editor for over 40 years, and under his leadership, Penn Studies in Landscape Architecture became a leading forum for the discussion of landscape architecture.

The Revised 1948 Edition of Penn Studies in Landscape Architecture was a major revision of the original journal. The new edition included a number of new essays and articles, as well as updated versions of some of the original essays. The Revised 1948 Edition also featured a new by Olmsted, Jr., in which he reflected on the history of the journal and the evolution of landscape architecture.

This facsimile edition of the Revised 1948 Edition of Penn Studies in Landscape Architecture is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the history, theory, and practice of landscape architecture. The essays and articles in this volume provide a rich and diverse collection of perspectives on the field, and they offer insights into the development of landscape architecture in the United States.
