The Life and Times of Hannibal

Hannibal was born in Carthage, a Phoenician city-state in North Africa, in 247 BC. His father, Hamilcar Barca, was a Carthaginian general who fought against Rome in the First Punic War. Hannibal grew up to be a brilliant military commander, and he quickly rose through the ranks of the Carthaginian army.

In 218 BC, Hannibal invaded Italy with a force of over 100,000 men and 37 elephants. He crossed the Alps, a feat that had never been accomplished before, and he marched on Rome. Hannibal defeated the Romans in several major battles, including the Battle of Cannae, where he annihilated a Roman army of over 80,000 men.

However, the Romans were able to rally and eventually defeat Hannibal. In 202 BC, Hannibal was forced to return to Carthage, where he was defeated by Scipio Africanus at the Battle of Zama. Hannibal fled to Asia, where he eventually committed suicide to avoid being captured by the Romans.

The Legacy of Hannibal

Hannibal is considered one of the greatest military commanders in history. His victories over the Romans are still studied by military strategists today. Hannibal's legacy is also evident in the many works of art and literature that have been inspired by his life and career.
